NUMBER 37.

The New Warden.

George P. Chinn, of Mercer county, was appointed warden of the State penitentiary at Frankfort, to succeed to the position made vacant by the resignation of E. T. Lillard. Mr. Chinn will assume his place at once. He is a son of Col. Jack Chinn and a brother of Clerk Chinn of the Court of Appeals.

Up-To-Date Shop.

All the farmers say that they get the best service when it comes to horse-shoeing and wood work and general blacksmithing at the old stand of J. W. Hughes. The place is conducted by Mr. Martin O'Neal the expert at the business.

Meeting Of School Board.

The Board of Education met Monday evening in regular monthly session with Messrs. Clifton Arnsperger, Dr. F. L. Lapsley, James H. Haggard and President R. P. Dow, a quorum.

Secretary Owings read the minutes of the last meeting and of the special joint session with the City Council of May 27, all of which were approved.

Superintendent Geo. W. Chapman then read his final report for the closing term of 1906-7 session of the Paris City Schools. The report only embraces the time ensuing from the date of the destruction of the school building January 28, 1907, all previous records having been destroyed. The report showed the daily average attendance of white pupils to be 381 and colored 220. The total enrollment for white pupils for the same time was 483. The school closed with a daily average attendance for the month of May of 382 against 325 for the same time last year. The report also showed a greater per cent. of promotions than for any previous year, due to the efficient work of the transient officer.

The amount received from non-resident pupils was as follows: white, $445.67; colored, $203.25; balance still due, $37.80; total amount, $676.72.

Upon representations by the Superintendent, the Board consented that he should be permitted to introduce Manual Training in the Colored School.

Dr. Lapsley, the Finance Committee stated that as the Board had a surplus on hand amounting to near $3,000 that $2,500 be applied to a note at the Citizens Bank reducing the indebtedness of the fund to practically $1,000.

A general discussion then followed with reference to the work of constructing the new building, it appearing that Hatfield Bappert and Woods Bros. the successful bidders for the foundation and brick work were the only ones so far who had filed their bonds.

Bourbon Circuit Court.

Since the preliminary work of the first day, Monday, Judge Robert L. Stout has been dispatching the business of the court with a vim that is favorably commented on by all. The sheriff and his deputies have been kept going.

In the case of J. D. McClintock vs. H. C. Howard, R. M. Harris, A. J. Fee, W. T. Talbott and S. S. Clay, the defendants filed general demurrer. Each of the defendants are sued in the sum of $25,000 damages for alleged slander in the filing of an affidavit by each of the defendants at the time the plaintiff, J. D. McClintock, was an applicant for the appointment of postmaster in this city in which his political fidelity was questioned.

In the matter of the application of Maury Robinson to practice law the court appointed County Attorney T. E. Moore, Jr., and Neville Fisher to examine Mr. Robinson and upon their report he was granted a license and admitted to the bar.

Mr. Robinson is a native of Charleston, W. Va., and is a student of the law department of Central University, Danville.

The case of commonwealth vs. Julian Throckmorton, for murder of Audley Green, was called Tuesday morning. The commonwealth answered ready. Hon. E. M. Dickson, counsel for the defense, asked for a continuance of the case on account of the absence of Bud Brink, an important witness for Throckmorton, and asked leave to file an affidavit setting forth what said Brink would testify to. This was granted and after filing affidavit the court overruled motion for new trial. After some difficulty the following jury was accepted to try the case:

Messrs. S. G. Clay, C. C. Clarke, Jos. Quisenberry, W. W. Judy and R. H. Hall, Paris; William Piper, Hutchison; C. M. Johnson and Elias Linville, Millersburg; Frank Lair and Thomas Fitzgerald, Jacksonville; E. B. Sparks, Clintonsville, and Steve Houston, Centerville.

After hearing the testimony and arguments of Hon. C. J. Bronston, for defendant, and Hon. Robt. Franklin, for commonwealth, the jury retired, and in about two hours returned a verdict giving Throckmorton eight years in the penitentiary.

The next case called was that of Commonwealth vs. Nat Gay, charged with murder. The jury was soon selected and a plea of not guilty entered by Messrs. N. C. Fisher and Judge Harmon Stitt, for the defense. The first witness was called but never testified as the case ended rather suddenly. Messrs. Fisher and Stitt made a proposition to the Commonwealth that they would withdraw their plea of not guilty and enter one of guilty if the Commonwealth would agree to a life sentence in the penitentiary. The Commonwealth accepted the proposition and this ended the case. Gay had murdered a negro woman near North Middletown, in cold blood.

The regular jurors and witnesses having been excused until this morning the Court took up several equity motions yesterday afternoon to put in the time.

PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.Plaint Of The Kentucky Colonel.

[From Cincinnati Times-Star.]

In the course of the trial of Col. Thomas Buford, who had expressed his disapproval of an adjudication made by the Kentucky Court of Appeals by shooting to death the chief justice, it seemed to be desirable on the part of the defense to establish a lack of mental poise. The task was made difficult by the fact that Col. Buford, while erratic, was a very strong-minded man. Equally erratic, equally strong-minded but much more sweet tempered was Col. Abe Buford, a brother. As a witness the latter was asked if he had ever noted anything about Col. Tom to indicate a lack of mental balance, to which query he responded: "Yes, he once told me he knew as much about race horses as I did." The court recognized the point as well taken.

This is a bit of history, but it is illustrative. Down in Kentucky public sentiment is expressing itself in vociferous protest against protracted racing. At first blush this might be taken by the uninitiated as evidence that the Kentucky colonel had lost his love for his racer and his racing. Not so. It isn't because he has, but because he has not that he mourns this modern departure. In it he recognizes the reign of sordidness usurping the reign of sentiment.

Since Kentucky was a mere county of Virginia, her sons have bred and run thoroughbreds. But it was for pleasure and not for profit. The spring meeting was a gala occasion, the autumn one scarcely less so; both were brilliant social functions, drawing together the cream of the Blue Grass and the Penroyal, the lowlands and the highlands.

Racing was a sport, the sport of gentlemen, a game of gameness and skill and judgment in which brain and stamina and squareness controlled the tourney and sentiment ruled the realm. It was a game fair women loved to watch and men loved to play for the very zest of seeing the best victorious. And who can say the horses loved it less. But it was a game limited to two brief meetings each year at each point, in springtime and in autumn.

Students of conditions tell us that the trend of times is toward commercialism. Racing has become a business. That which was a pleasurable pastime has become a profitable profession. Just in proportion as it has taken on importance to the poolroom and the bookmaker, it has lost in interest to the people of Kentucky as a people. Hence the protest of Kentucky against continuous racing over the State circuit is less a wave of moral reform looking to the elimination of the sport than it is an expression of sentiment looking to its re-establishment and future preservation as a sport. It is rather a protest against the greed of gambling than against the game. It is a prayer for a redemption from the era of the sport by a re-establishment of the era of the sportsman.

Just as much as of old does the Kentuckian love his race horse and his racing. What he deprecates is that he no longer owns the one nor controls the other. Nor has the heritage passed to his sons in direct line. There are yet Abe Bufords in the Blue Grass. The Harper spirit that "always runs them from end to end" is by no means dead. Paroles, Harry Bassetts, Longfellow and McChorters there may be. And that is why Kentucky thinks that a little reform of her racing just now would be a good thing.

A Progressive Democrat.

In the course of an interview in New York the other day Mr. Bryan was asked to give his idea of a progressive Democrat, and he replied:

"In every country there are two extremes in politics—the radical and the conservative. It is the aim of the progressive Democrat to steer a middle course between the two and to take up all great measures and solve them. This year I find the Democratic party to be in excellent condition and more united than ever, while on the contrary the Republicans are divided. There are two elements in the Republican party, one which I might call the extremists and the other 'the stand-batters,' the latter representing those people who have put their hands in the other people's pockets and wish to keep them there."

Party Feuds.

Our Republican friends are very prone to point out the differences of opinion amongst Democrats as to men and measures with a view of preventing the unification of the Democratic party. They cannot therefore complain if their own factional fights are exploited, especially as they are asserting themselves most aggressively and obtrusively. These Republican feuds are most prevalent in New York, Delaware, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Kansas, Minnesota, North and South Dakotas, Iowa and California.

In New York there is the Hughes and anti-Hughes factions; in Delaware Addicks is still a bone of contention; in Massachusetts the tariff revisionists and standpatters are expressing themselves in anything but a kindly mood about each other; in Pennsylvania the Penrose ring is battering the reformers and graft is so prevalent that the honest Republican voters are becoming more and more disgusted; in Ohio the Taft and Foraker factions are trying to destroy each other; in Kansas there is a complication of corruption and personal politics; in Minnesota it is the people against the machine tincture with too much railroad boodle; in North Dakota the Northern Pacific Railroad ring has been knocked out and is ready to turn the State over to the Democrats rather than see the reformers successful; in South Dakota the Gamble and Kitteridge factions are preparing for another death struggle; Iowa the Cummins and anti-Cummins rings are opposing each other on whether the tariff shall continue to shelter the trusts and who shall succeed Allison as Senator; in California the Harriman railroad ring has the party by the throat and there is an era of corruption and grafting, with several prominent Republicans in danger of indictment and conviction. In fact the States where the Republican party is united are the exception and it is almost impossible to name one where charges of grafting and rottenness are not openly made by some faction against another faction.

These Republican feuds are disgusting the honest voters of that party and it is evident that it will be more and more difficult to get all the elements necessary to success combined on whoever is nominated. The bitterness engendered will also affect the nomination and election of the local tickets and there is where the Democrats will have a great opportunity in some of the doubtful States and Congressional districts.

But to take advantages of these differences amongst Republicans the Democrats must unite and while cleaving to the essential principles of Democracy can afford to compromise or lay by their disagreements on policies until they defeat the common enemy.

Political Pick-Ups.

The Ohio Club composed of officeholders in Washington is not going to be left off the band wagon if it knows itself. At the last meeting the members cheered for both Taft and Foraker and threw out an anchor to windward by also endorsing Roosevelt and Hughes.

Those who expect the Republicans really intend to reform the tariff should take heed of the declaration of Speaker Cannon that the coming Congress was elected on the platform of "let well enough alone." As Uncle Joe will probably be elected speaker and thus again boss the people's representatives, the standpatters will have the inside track and reform will be postponed until—well, when the Democrats control Congress.

How can the tariff which protects the trusts be "revised down by its friends?" The principal friends of the tariff are the trusts and protected interests.

The New York Journal of Commerce asks "why pay the railroad penalties?" well, we should guess that everyone pays his share, from Teddy to the tramp, who eats, drinks or wears, anything that is carried by rail.

reciprocity for ten years of the Republican Congresses one would think they would soon get tired of it and help the Democrats out with their tariff reform program.

The Chicago Chronicle, perhaps the most vicious Republican newspaper in the United States, has ceased publication on account of lack of patronage. For years it has been a rat hole into which some of the Walsh money was poured that led to the failure of the Walsh banks.

Her Husband's Book.

"James, dear, will you bring me up a scuttle of coal from the cellar?" said a busy wife.

"That's just the way with you," said James, with a frown, as he put down his book and rose from the armchair.

"Just the way with me?"

"Yes!" he snapped. "As soon as you see me enjoying myself you have something or other for me to do. Didn't you see I was absorbed in my reading?"

"Well, dear, I will do it myself."

"Yes, and tell everybody, your mother especially, that you have to carry your own coal up from the cellar. No, I'll do it. Let me mark my place."

So he marked the place in the book at which he had ceased reading, and when he went down to the cellar, grumbling all the way, she picked up the volume and found it was a love story and that the passage he had been absorbed in was as follows:

"My darling, when you are my wife I will shield and protect you from every care. The winds of heavens shall not visit your face too roughly; those pretty hands shall never be soiled by menial tasks; your wish shall be my law; your happiness—"

Just then he reappeared and, dropping the scuttle upon the floor, said:

"There's your coal! Give me my book."—Tit-Bits.

Man and His "Galluses."

The "gallus" marks the freeman and the man of genuine, unpretending culture and civilization. Your snob and your savage abhor it. In Mesopotamia the wild bashi bazook wears a belt; in Yucatan the Indian wears a girdle of shark's teeth; in Senegambia the shameless cannibal sports a gunny sack; in Atlantic City some years back the dudes used to wear sashes. But find a man who when he throws off his coat to begin his daily toil lays bare a pair of heavy sky blue galluses and you'll find a man who pays his way in the world, loves his wife, rears his children in the fear of the Lord and votes the straight ticket. The "gallus" is useful, it is graceful, and properly adorned with hand painted flowers and brass buckles it is beautiful. To be ashamed of it, to conceal it or to abandon it for a somber leather belt is to fail in an essential of true manhood and fly in the face of fate.—Baltimore Sun.

The Circle County.

The oddest shaped county among the thousands which go to make up the separate divisions of the various states is Warren county, Tenn. It lies almost exactly in the geographical center of the state and is about as near a perfect circle as any division of land could possibly be. The circle would be perfect but for the fact that there is a short stretch of the northern boundary line which follows a small stream for a short distance. It is bounded by Cannon, Dekalb, Coffee, Grundy, Van Buren and White counties.

Reserve Buds.

Every one has noticed how, when a large branch of a tree is cut off, small branches will shoot out around the stump. These branches are from the reserve buds, of which all trees have a great number at every portion of their surface. Under ordinary circumstances these never come to maturity, but when the tree is wounded or cut off or loses some of its branches the reserve buds at once come into play and renew the foliage.

Her Scheme.

Mrs. De Style—He never gave her any part of his wages, but spent it all in a nearby saloon. Mrs. Gunbusta—How mean! Mrs. De Style—But he gives her every cent now. Mrs. Gunbusta—She's reformed him, eh? Mrs. De Style—No, but she runs the saloon. —New York Times.

In families well ordered there is always one firm, sweet temper, which controls without seeming to dictate. The Greeks represented persuasion as crowned—Bulwer.

Do You Open Your Mouth

Like a young bird and gulp down whatever food or medicine may be offered you? Or, do you want to know something of the composition and character of that which you take into your stomach whether as food or medicine?

Most intelligent and sensible people now-a-days insist on knowing what they employ whether as food or as medicine. Dr. Pierce believes they have a perfect right to insist upon such knowledge. So he publishes, broadcast and on each bottle wrapper, what his medicines are made of and verifies it under each. This he feels he can well afford to do because the more the ingredients of which his medicines are made are studied and understood the more will their superior curative virtues be appreciated.

For the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses, irregularities and derangements, giving rise to frequent headaches, backache, dragging-down pain or distress in lower abdominal or pelvic region, accompanied, oftentimes, with a debilitating, pelvic, catarrhal drain and kindred symptoms of weakness, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a most efficient remedy. It is equally effective in curing painful periods, in giving strength to nursing mothers and in preparing the system of the expectant mother for baby's coming, thus rendering childbirth safe and comparatively painless. The "Favorite Prescription" is a most potent, strengthening tonic to the general system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. It is also a soothing and invigorating nerve and cures nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, chorea or St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing nervous symptoms attendant upon functional and organic diseases of the distinctly feminine organs.

A host of medical authorities of all the several schools of practice, recommend each of the several ingredients of which "Favorite Prescription" is made for the cure of the diseases for which it is claimed to be a cure. You may read what they say for yourself by sending a postal card request for a free booklet of extracts from the leading authorities, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post.

A Filmy Craft.

While it is rarely employed by Europeans as a method of travel, even in emergencies, the catamaran of the Madras fishermen of India is by all odds the most extraordinary of water vehicles. It consists simply of three logs lashed together and flush with the surface of the water. On these a fisherman (sometimes two or more fishermen) stands and with a single oar paddles himself far out to sea. A Madras fisherman may venture out when boatmen will not launch their craft, and even in weather when boats cannot be launched he will go through the surf and out to ships with letters, for the delivery of which he gets a few pence. In order to catch their ships a few belated travelers have been known to trust themselves on catamarans. They are united in the statement that the ride on the logs was the most nerve trying experience they had undergone in a land that holds a new thrill for the stranger at every turn. The sea and an occasional ducking have no terrors for these natives, not even the extremely young, and in reality the catamaran is not entirely to be scorned, for it is, after all, nonsinkable.

Water Pipes and Freezing.

Housekeepers as a rule do not understand why it is the hot water pipe is the first to freeze in very cold weather. They think that it ought to be the other way around—that hot water ought to withstand the low temperature longer than cold water will. That does seem reasonable, but a little investigation shows us that it is not. Hot water freezes more quickly than cold water for several reasons. In the first place, the boiling of water expels the air from it, and water will not freeze until it has parted with its air. In the second place, there is always a slight agitation on the surface of hot water, and this promotes congelation by assisting the crystals to change their position until they assume that most favorable to solidification. Then the particles in hot water divide into smaller globules by reason of the heat, and less resistance is therefore offered to the cold than in cold water.

Healthfulness of Honey.

"Honey, one of the most nutritious and delicate of foods, should be eaten more than it is," said a cooking expert. "Bought in the comb, it is bound to be unadulterated, and this pure honey will keep its friends free from sore throat and bronchial troubles. I have not had a sore throat since six years ago I took to eating honey. My doctor tells me he often recommends honey, with excellent results, for diseases of the throat. Honey is excellent to use instead of sugar for sweetening cakes. It gives the cakes a most delightful flavor. It is also excellent in place of butter on hot biscuit, on toast and on buckwheat cakes. I know a number of women who use honey as a cosmetic. They apply it to the skin, rub it in well, then wash it off with hot water. The result is a finer textured complexion, a glowing color, a young, fresh look."

Instinctive Piety of the Irish Gael.

As Dr. Douglas Hyde pointed out, "the Irish Gael is pious by nature. There is not an Irishman in a hundred in whom is the making of an unbeliever. God is for him assured, true, intelligible. When he meets a neighbor, instead of saying 'Bon jour' or 'Good morning' he says 'God salute you.' Indeed, all the ordinary invocations and salutations of the Irish language are governed by this religious feeling. "When he takes snuff from you" he will say, 'The blessing of God be with the souls of your dead.' If a sudden wonderment surprises him he will cry, 'A thousand laudations to God,' and if he be shown a young child or anything else for the first time he will say, 'Prosperity from God on it.'—London Spectator.

Lava.

Lava may be blown into opaque bottles of gossamer lightness, and the harder sort makes a beautiful green glass of half the weight and double the strength of ordinary glass. But it is not always the same. Every volcano pours out its own special brand of molten mixture, disagreeable to walk on, but sometimes yielding precious products, as pumice stone. Lava, like all things, decomposes under the touch of time, as the fertile plains of Sicily testify.

Ancient Glass.

In the Slade collection at the British museum in London the most ancient specimen of pure glass the date of which can be approximately fixed is a small glass head, bearing the name of an Egyptian king of the eleventh dynasty. That is to say, at a period which may be moderately placed at more than 2,000 years B. C. glass was made with a skill which shows that the art was far from new.—London Telegraph.

Puzzled.

The distinguished alienist looked worried. "No," he said to the reporter, "I can't give you an opinion as to the sanity of the prisoner." "But surely you have considered the case?" "It isn't that," replied the alienist; "but, you see, each side has sent me a retainer, and as these are the same amounts I am, of course, in temporary doubt."—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Cautious Doctor.

"Doctor, something is the matter with me. Sometimes my mind is a perfect blank, and my memory constantly fails me. I wish you would treat me." "I will. But in view of the peculiar nature of your case I shall want my fee in advance."

None is to be deemed free who has not perfect self command.—Pythagoras.

One Word's Meanings.

English is a most remarkable language. It has some peculiarities of an extraordinarily rich vocabulary and others of the poorest and most barren tongue, separate words for minute distinctions and single words that have many meanings. Many examples of both peculiarities can be found in the Dialect Dictionary, an English publication. Every farmer's boy knows how to use the words lamb, sheep, ewe and ram, but how many of them would be able to define the words tag, tup-hog, teaser, tup-seg, tup-yeld and six tooth, each of which fixes the age or the sex of a sheep? For example, a tup-hog is a young ram before the first shearing. On the other hand, take the word rack. As used by people in one part of England or another it may mean a neck of mutton, the bones of a dead horse, a blow, a sharp pain, a kitchen fireplace, part of a hand loom, a reach in a river, a ford, a pathway, a rut, a gap in a hedge, a flying cloud, to pour off liquor, to stack. These are the unusual meanings, and there are others more common.—Youth's Companion.

"DO IT TO-DAY!"

"And to think that ten months ago I looked like this! I owe it to German Syrup."

"The time-worn injunction, 'Never put off till to-morrow what you can do to-day,' is now generally presented in this form: 'Do it to-day!' That is the terse advice we want to give you about that hacking cough or demoralizing cold with which you have been struggling for several days, perhaps weeks. Take some reliable remedy for it to-day—and let that remedy be Dr. Boschee's German Syrup, which has been in use for over thirty-five years. A few doses of it will undoubtedly relieve your cough or cold, and its continued use for a few days will cure you completely. No matter how deep-seated your cough, even if dread consumption has attacked your lungs, German Syrup will surely effect a cure—as it has done before in thousands of apparently hopeless cases of lung trouble. New trial bottles, 25c; regular size, 75c. At all druggists.

Thomas-Nichols Nuptial.

One of the most brilliant of the June weddings was on Wednesday evening at 6:30 o'clock at the Christian Church, when Miss Calla Thomas, of this city, was given in marriage to Mr. Thomas Ashbrook Nichols, of Cincinnati.

The church was tastefully decorated, a row of palms in regular settings circled the choir, while at each corner of the rostrum an embankment of ferns added effect to the happy scene. The bridegroom was draped in smilax giving a tropical appearance to the brilliantly lighted edifice. The spacious auditorium and Sunday school annex were thrown open into one, the entire building filling early with guests, relatives and friends, many handsome toilettes being worn in honor of the occasion.

As the guests assembled Miss Sarah Grinnan played a beautiful program of selected music. To the opening chords of the bridal chorus from Lohengrin the bridal party entered from the parlor of the church, appearing facing the audience, and passing between the pillars of the balcony to the rostrum. The first to appear was the officiating minister, Elder Carey E. Morgan, coming from the left of the baptistry.

Next came the groomsmen, Mr. Clarence Kenney, of this city, and Mr. Fred McCoy, of Pittsburg, Pa., followed by the bridesmaids, Misses Ollie Butler, of this city and Anna Belle Fox, of Danville; next came the groomsmen, Mr. Withers Davis, of this city, and Mr. Charles H. Fitzwillson, of Cincinnati, followed by the maid of honor, Mrs. Robert Hopkins, of Louisville. Then came the charming maid of honor, Miss Macie Talbott, of North Middletown, followed by the bride on the arm of her brother, Mr. Clarence Thomas, who gave her in marriage, the bridegroom and best man, his brother, Mr. Roger S. Nichols, of Lexington, appearing from the baptistry and joining them at the altar.

The bride was lovely in her wedding robe of real lace and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley. The ceremony was beautiful and impressive, the ring service being used, being presented by the best man the bridegroom, who placed the ring on the finger of his bride as Miss Talbott, the maid of honor, raised the veil.

After the benediction the bridal party left to the sweet strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, the bridegroom and bride leading the way, followed by their brothers, Mr. Clarence Thomas and Mr. Roger S. Nichols. Then came the bridal party in the following order: The maid of honor, Mrs. Robert Hopkins, and Mr. Withers Davis, the maid of honor, Miss Macie Talbott, and Mr. Chas. H. Fitzwillson, Miss Ollie Butler and Mr. Clarence Kenney, Miss Anna Belle Fox, and Mr.

Fred McCoy.

As the audience assembled, Mrs. Dr. Frank Pithian sang sweetly "Till I Wake," and "A Song of Waiting."

The dame of honor, Mrs. Robert Hopkins, was lovely in a gown of white satin made princess and trimmed in point lace and carried a bouquet of white carnations. The maid of honor, and bridesmaids were each gowned in white mull and carried bouquets of white carnations. They were charming maids and never looked lovelier than on this occasion.

After the ceremony the happy couple returned to the home of her parents, where her wedding gown was changed for a traveling suit of leather brown cloth, and they departed on an interurban car for Lexington where they boarded a train for an extended trip to the east.

Upon their return they will reside at Cincinnati, where the bridegroom is successfully engaged in civil engineering.

The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Will Thomas. She is a handsome and lovely young woman, the possession of a sweet disposition, accomplished and is loved by all who know her.

The happy couple were the recipients of many handsome and costly presents that attested the esteem of their many relatives.

Mr. Cave will tell the story of the great earthquake and fire and of the effect on the work of the Christian churches in that city. No collection will be taken. Elder Carey E. Morgan will preach at night. Subject, "Jesus and his Followers."

Terrible Hail Storm In Portion Of Bourbon.

Hail stones as large as guinea eggs fell in such quantities Wednesday afternoon in the western part of Fayette county and eastern Bourbon county that the ground was covered with them and thousands of dollars worth of damage was done to hemp, corn and wheat. In many of the fields near Muir Station the wheat was laid flat to the ground, the hemp ruined and the corn chopped to pieces.

The tobacco plants are so small that they escaped serious danger.

The storm came up from the South west. The cloud was as black as night and many of the residents of that section thought that the severest storm of the year was about to swoop down on them.

Thos. Fisher Dies.

Mr. Tom Fisher, aged 53 years died at his home, on corner of Vine and Third streets, yesterday afternoon, near 4 o'clock, after several months' illness of stomach trouble. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Carrie Hildreth Fisher and one brother, Mr. Turner Fisher, of Mercer county, who has been at his bedside for several days.

Tom Fisher was one of the most popular men in this community. He was a man who was held in the highest esteem by all—the very soul of honor. No one ever heard him speak ill of anyone. He was quiet and unassuming, generous to a fault and a true friend. Peace to his ashes.

R. L. Thomas Marries a Washington Belle.

The following special from Washington City appeared in yesterday's Lexington Herald:

"Robert Lee Thomas, the Ford, Ky., turfman, and Miss Irma Trent, a Washington belle, are the principals in an unusual romance. They were wedded after having visited sixteen preachers. Mr. Thomas is forty-three years old and his bride, who is known socially as Miss 'Dimple,' is twenty-three. She met Mr. Thomas last fall at Benning and their love quickly ripened.

"Mr. Thomas visited Washington Sunday, and called on fifteen ministers of the gospel before one could be found willing to pronounce the couple man and wife. The sixteenth was Dr. Radcliffe, of the New York Avenue Presbyterian church, who performed the ceremony. Mr. Thomas' sister, Mrs. Ireland, of Paris, Ky., was present. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas left at once for New York, as several of Mr. Thomas' horses are running at Belmont.

Mrs. Thomas was born in Atlanta, Ga., but the family soon afterward removed to Lynchburg, where she went to school until six years ago, when she came with her parents to live in Washington.

"Bob" Thomas is known on every track in the United States. Perhaps his best known horse is Harcourt, named for his first wife, who was one of the beautiful Harcourt sisters, of Versailles. She died about three years ago. Among his other horses are Laura Clay, Aunt Rose, King's Daughter and Aunt Jane."

The Courier-Journal, of yesterday, contained the following special from New York: "The biggest coup of the year was pulled off at the Gravesend track Wednesday afternoon on the result of the third race. R. L. Thomas, the lumber merchant of Ford, Ky., won the race with his five-year-old Wexford after backing him from 25 to 1 to 7 to 2, taking fully $80,000 from the book-makers."

The Prospector.

By FRANK H. SWEET.

Copyright, 1906, by Frank H. Sweet.

BRENTWOOD, prospector, struggled up until he came to a sharp spur, around which he was flattening himself to pass, when he saw a man just beyond crouching over a crevice from which grew some twisted roots topped by green leaves. He was holding the point of a pick in his hands and was apparently trying to pry out the roots. As Brent appeared the man sprang to his feet, his face expressing startled fright, followed almost instantly by anger.

"What ye doin' here?" he demanded fiercely.

"Prospecting," Brent answered.

The man's hands tightened convulsively upon the pick, and he seemed half minded to spring forward and use it as a weapon. Then his hands relaxed.

"Well, he threatened, 'ye mosey back jest as fast 's the Lord 'll let ye. If ye don't'—"

"Oh, tut, tut, man!" interrupted Brent carelessly. "This is too large a country for one person to monopolize. What ye diggin' those roots for—to eat?"

The man only glared.

"Yes, I see ye are," affably. "I've been crowded down to them myself before now. But they're not fit for a coyote to chew on except to keep off starvation—though, if ye'll excuse me, ye look as if ye'd had roots as a steady diet for quite a spell. But see here," suddenly, "suppose ye come down to my camp in front of the big cave. I'm laying out for a regular down east supper tonight, with everything but pie, and I'd like ye to join me. We might explore the cave afterward by torchlight. It looked interestingly risky. But why?"

He did not finish the sentence, for the man had suddenly choked out an imprecation and was now hurrying in the opposite direction, stumbling and muttering as he ran. Brent looked after him pityingly.

"Loony," he thought. "Prospected till he got out of provisions and then went crazy. Poor fellow!"

He returned to camp soberly. The water was now boiling merrily, and he poured into it nearly a quart of white beans. They would do for his morrow's dinner, as he wished to spend the entire day prospecting.

Several generous slices of ham were cut and spread in a frying pan and with them half a dozen eggs. Then he opened a package of bacon and peeled and sliced the onions and made the coffee. The air was soon fragrant with their cooking, and above all the rest rose the rich, pungent smell of the onions.

Several times during the preparations for supper Brent thought he heard noises from the growth above.

Into eyes that had grown hard with gold seeking were coming new expressions of tenderness and joy. But the face of Moses was grave.

"Thirty-nine years of prospectin'," he said at last, breaking the silence, "an' now at seventy ready to quit, with no kith or kin or friend in the world save ye three to look glad. 'Tain't goin' to be so blame fine as I thought."

"Ye've all got somebody," he went on presently. "I can see it in your eyes an' in the way ye smile to yourselves. I've never had nobody in all my life, not one. The first thing I remember was bein' an orphan an' fightin' for my grub. Now I'm goin' to ask ye to sheer your homes with me for a half hour or so. I've been watchin' ye an' thinkin' I over. We'll be sayin' goodbye in a few weeks an' mebbe won't ever see each other ag'in. Won't ye sheer your wives an' babies with me for a little while? Ye've got letters an' photographs, an' ye can tell me what they do an' say an' how they look. It'll be something for me to think about arter we separate."

"I don't mind," said Dikker. He drew a package from his pocket, worn and soiled by much handling, and took from it the photograph of a middle aged woman, which he passed across to Moses. Then he read his letters through, one by one, slowly.

"We've been married thirty-two years," he said as he finished, "an' there's only jest we two. But Lizzy's the best woman on God's earth. I was a carder in a cotton mill, an' Lizzy worked in the weave shop. She works in the weave shop now. It'll be a great thing for me to go back with money enough to set her up so she won't have to work another blessed day in all her life."

"I've got a whole passle," said Sam in answer to Moses' inquiring look. "There's seven children, an' the last letter said the baby was goin' to be married. She wa'n't but eleven when I left home. All the other children are married an' got families, an' I have a whole lot o' brothers an' sisters with families. I reckon they're all poor too. They used to be. Lord! Lord, won't it be fun to take enough money home to set 'em all up," with a big, breezy laugh. "But wait till ye hear their letters," and he drew a huge package from his pocket, which he opened proudly.

When they were all read Moses turned to Brent.

"What a thing 'tis to have folks," he said wistfully. "I don't see how anybody can leave 'em an' come to a place like this. I s'pose ye've got somebody too?"

"Yes," Brent answered. "I have the dearest old mother in the world."

He selected several letters from a number which he drew from his pocket and read them through slowly. The last paragraph ran: "And now, dear boy, take the best care ye can of yourself and don't worry about me. I have kept up the farm and paid off $100 on the $2,000 mortgage. It isn't much in ten years, I suppose, but it's something, and I have kept up all the grub ye got."

"A three months' allowance for one man."

"That's three weeks for four men, or a month, mebbe, with moderation. Plenty, I guess, to carry us through."

Brent smiled sarcastically.

"Don't ye think it might be a good idea to ask my consent first?" he asked.

"We're three men, an' ye ain't but one," composedly. "Though, of course, that don't matter now. After the supper we couldn't be hostile. Anyway, ye'll be ready to come in all right, even on the smallest lay, soon's ye know. Seems odd, don't it?" reflectively—"but jest the smell o' that supper was all that saved your life. Oh, I don't mind tellin' now," at the inquiry in Brent's eyes, "long 's ye come in this cave, an' Dikker there heard ye speak 'bout explorin' it. That left but one thing for us to do. We was hid up there with our guns p'inted, an' we was goin' to give ye ten minutes to pack up an' git. If ye didn't, an' from what Dikker said we knowed ye wouldn't, we was goin' to shoot. There wouldn't be nothin' else we could do," earnestly.

"Well, I had my gun p'inted an' mouth open to holler when I got a full smell o' them ham an' eggs right in my throat, an' I waited a little to git one more smell, with my mouth wide open, when the onions come up. Lord," smacking his lips reminiscently, "I've lived seventy years, an' I never had another second like that in all my life. I jest laid my gun down an' stuck my nose out fur's I could; then I felt 'shamed an' looked round. But Dikker's nose an' Sam's nose was both stickin' out jest the same. That finished us. We couldn't a' stayed up there another minute for all the gold in these mountains. It's been ten weeks—ten whole weeks—since we swallered our last bit o' pork, an' in all that time we ain't had a thing but roots 'biled to chaw on."

"Ten weeks!" exclaimed Brent in amazement. "Why, man alive, I once lived on them two days and thought I'd starve. Why didn't one of ye go out arter provisions?"

"Dassent," laconically. "They's too many prospectors round watchin'. They can tell from the size of a man's eyes what he's found. We have a spot where we can pick up gold with our fingers, an' we'd rather starve than take chances. But I reckon we four can git it all out in a month, an' ye can have an eighth share from now on. An'—oh, yes, my name's Moses, thirty-nine years prospectin' an' never struck it rich till now. Who might ye be?"

"My name's Brent Harlan, ten years prospectin', but going home soon now."

A week later they were gathered around the campfire. It was after supper, and they had all been smoking, but now the pipes were laid aside, and they were gazing into the fire. Prospecting days were nearly over for them.

Into eyes that had grown hard with gold seeking were coming new expressions of tenderness and joy. But the face of Moses was grave.

the three reached for the fried onions. When the new lot was ready the old was entirely done, even to the last scrap of bacon rind, and the three were watching Brent's skillful movements with ravenous but appreciative eyes. Not until their appetites were entirely satisfied and they had moved back, wiping their mouths upon their hands, did one of them speak. Then the white haired giant nodded sociably to Brent. "Prospectin'?" he asked.

"Yes."

"Well, slowly, 'I reckon we'll have to let ye in—on a small lay, mebbe. After eatin' that supper we couldn't plan for nothin' hostile. How much grub ye got?"

The.... Professor's Way.

By HENRY
LEWIS.

Copyright, 1907, by E. C. Parcells.

Professor Sweetzer, naturalist for a certain New England college, was a little man. He was round shouldered. He was awkward on his legs. He wore goggles for his weak eyes, and he arrived at the age of fifty-five without having loved. As between bugs and beetles and women, the bugs and beetles were ahead. It was only on rare occasions and when under the stress of excitement that he took the slightest notice of the other sex. Even when he did sit up and take notice of them he could not have recalled half an hour later what he said or whether they had red hair or black.

On a certain day it came to the ears of Professor Sweetzer that a portion of the vertebrae of a whale had been found on a farm in Connecticut. He arrived on the spot next day and verified the find. On an occasion thousands of years before an old bull whale had decided to take a trip inland and through some error of judgment had left his bones in a gravel pit. A piece of the backbone six feet long had been uncovered. The professor wanted to excavate for the rest. Where there is six feet of whale you can take it that there is more. He engaged board at the Widow Webb's and hired a man to wield the pick and shovel and thus went to work.

The Widow Webb was fat and forty and childless. She was worth a stony farm and $800 in cash. A still older sister lived with her, and the farm work was done by a hired man with the good old fashioned name of Hiram Stebbins. Hiram was thirty-five and drank nothing stronger than cider, but he thought deeply. One of them was that if he married the widow he would become the possessor of the farm and $800. He had been thinking of this and taking the farm work easy when Professor Sweetzer put in an appearance. Hiram looked at him and grinned. If any one had told him that within a week he would be jealous of that little dried up and humpbacked specimen of humanity, he would have roared with laughter.

As soon as the professor had inspected the bone and become enthusiastic, he was a changed man. He became a fluent talker. He became fatherly toward the widow. He called her "my child," and often took her hand and held it while he tried to make her understand that a whale was a cachelot and that a cachelot could stand on his tail in the water as well as on his head.

When Hiram witnessed the hand holding act, he quit grinning. He was mad all that day as he heeded corn. He was mad when he came up to supper. He was mad when one of the cows kicked him at milking time. While the professor took a ramble in search of beetles, Hiram carried the milk into the kitchen and began:

"Widder Webb, how does it feel to have a baboon holding your hand?"

"Hiram, what do you mean?" was demanded.

"I mean that I have seen you and that little runt of a man squeezing hands a dozen times, and neither of you seems to care who stands by. Fell in love mighty quick, didn't you?"

"Look here, Mr. Stebbins, you have no right to talk to me this way. You know who the professor is. He's a great man. He has taught me more about whales in the last three days than I knew in all my life before. He also knows all about birds and bugs and bees. It's twice as interesting to hear him talk as it is to hear a sermon."

"Has a feller got to squeeze your hand to talk to you about whales?" asked Hiram.

"He hasn't squeezed it. That's simply his way. He is a fatherly man. When he gets to talking he don't know whether he has got hold of my hand or the leg of a chair. You ought to be ashamed of yourself to talk as you do. I always thought there was a mean and jealous streak in you, and now it's come out."

"Oh, it has, eh?" muttered Hiram. "Perhaps if I went around looking for the bones of an old whale, I'd be all right."

"I guess it would be better than grunting around. You don't care for educated folks, but I do. I was born that way. If I was to ask you about whales, you couldn't tell me anything."

"But the professor could?"

"Yes, sir, he could. Hiram Stebbins, do you know that the Latin name of whale is Physeter macrocephalus? Do you know that we get spermaceti and ambergris from its body? Do you know that he sometimes reaches the length of seventy or eighty feet? You stand there with a mean look on your face, and yet let me tell you that the sperm whale can swallow a man at a gulp. There are no teeth in the upper jaw, but the lower one has from twenty-five to thirty on each side. The eyes are small and placed far back in the head."

"Well?" grunted the hired man.

"Well, the cachelot feeds upon fishes and cephalopodous mollusks. You probably thought he fed upon turnips. The whale is gregarious. Five hundred or more have been seen in a single herd. Terrible conflicts often take place among the males, and it is not unusual to find the lower jaws deformed. The left eye is said to be smaller than the right, and the whale cannot see behind him."

"All from the professor!" sneered Hiram as he bowed and walked out to fasten the beneop for the night.

When the professor wasn't assisting his man to dig for bones he was hunting bugs and bees and butterflies. To his great joy, he discovered a seven spot bumblebee. As all of us know, a bumblebee is of dark color, with yellow spots on his back. There are often from five to six spots and only rarely a seven spotter. This bee, along with a dozen others, was placed in a pasteboard box, and when the house was reached the box was deposited on a window sill of the veranda. The professor had told the widow all about whales. As soon as he had a little spare time he meant to tell her all about bumblebees. Two days had gone by when the moment came. The bone digging labors of the day were over and supper disposed of when the professor and the widow took chairs on the veranda. He had found the shell of a small turtle in the gravel that day, and he set out to first explain about that. Hiram Stebbins was greasing his boots and chewing the rag in the kitchen and could hear every word. He also knew all about that box of bumblebees on the window sill.

According to Professor Sweetzer, turtles had hearts and lungs, hopes and aspirations. He would even go so far as to say that turtles loved and were loved in return. They did not sing like a bird nor bellow like a frog, but they were supposed to have musical ears for all that. In his earnestness the man got hold of the widow's hand. It was only his way. If he had got hold of her ear it would have been the same. He had called her his dear woman and his dear child half a dozen times, and in his lecture he had got as far back as the turtle's markings when Hiram Stebbins could restrain himself no longer. He saw red. He thirsted for gore. He rose up to do murder, but checked his onslaught and walked softly into the sitting room. The widow was up and the bee box before him, while the backs of the sitters were toward him. He lifted the cover and stepped back.

The dozen bumbles had been hopping mad and calling each other names for the two days. The cover was no sooner off than they swarmed to get room to square off. As they caught sight of the professor and the widow, however, the hatchet was instantly buried. There was a wild swoop, followed by wilder yells. Old seven spot led in the fray. He it was who lifted the professor over the veranda rail and let him drop among the hollyhocks while the rest were paying the widow attentions. The professor ran and was followed, the widow shrieked and was stung again and again. It was not until Hiram rushed out with smoke and flame that she was rescued and a neighbor woman sent for to treat the lumps and bumps and put her to bed. The professor returned not. Old seven spot wouldn't let him. No news came from him as the hours of night wore on, and Hiram wondered, but next morning the widow received a note reading:

"My dear child, please send my satchel by bearer. I'm off after more bones. The turtle, as I meant to have told you, is utterly without ambition."

"Waal," said Hiram to himself as he worked in the cornfield that day, "there was the professor and me and the widder and the whale and the bumblebees, and if I hain't come out top o' the heap, who has?"

The Ship's Log.

The ship's log consists of a log chip and a log line. The log chip is a piece of board, shaped like the fourth part of a circle, loaded with lead on the round side, so that it will stand up in the water. The log line is 150 to 200 fathoms long. It is wound upon a large reel, so held as to let it run out easily. The line is divided into equal parts by bits of string run through it, each marked by the number of knots in it; hence these divisions are called knots. The log chip when thrown into the water stands still and draws out the log line as fast as it unwinds, and the speed of the ship is shown by the number of knots that run out in half a minute. The usual length of a knot is 47.3 feet. When it is known how many of these run out in half a minute, it is easy to calculate how many would run out in an hour by multiplying by 120. The record of the heaving of the log, as well as all important things happening on shipboard, is made in a log book.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Open to Conviction.

No rock was ever more firmly fixed than were Mrs. Manser's opinions, but she considered herself of an extremely pliable disposition, with a mind open to conviction on all sides.

"It's the strangest thing to me, the way the rest of the family talk as if I were set in my views," she said one day to her nephew William's bride, with whom she had been laboring on the subject of calling cards for more than an hour. "It seems to me you're sort of taking the same tone," she continued, looking sharply at the young woman, "and I don't want you to. There isn't anybody in this world that's readier to be convinced she's in the wrong than I am by people who know more than I. All they've got before 'em, ever, is to prove to me that they do know more than I—and I tell you, my dear, there hasn't one of 'em ever been able to in this family!"—Youth's Companion.

The Koran.

The Koran, or Al Koran, the sacred book of the Mohammedans, was written about 610 A. D. by Mohammed. It is a prose poem of 6,000 verses, the object of which was to show that God had told everything that was worth telling to Mohammed and that those who doubted it should be slain in this world and turned over to Allah to be eternally damned in the world to come. There are today some 200,000,000 of human beings who profess to believe in the Koran.

C. F. BROWER & CO.
LEXINGTON, KY.Bourbon Cattle Sell High.

The sale of two car loads of export cattle, the property of Messrs. John B. Kennedy and L. B. M. Bedford, both of near Paris, at Pittsburg, illustrates the profit to farmers who produce the best stock for Eastern markets. The cattle fed by Mr. Kennedy were one year younger than those of his neighbor and weighed an average of 125 pounds less. The younger cattle lost in shipping an average of 75 pounds, while the heavy cattle only lost an average of 49 pounds per head, the latter being fed corn till the day of shipment while the former were turned to blue grass May 1.

The cattle of Mr. Kennedy were sold at Pittsburg for $6.40 per hundred, while those of Mr. Bedford realized $6.30.

Based upon the weight of the cattle before shipment and making allowances for expenses the cattle realized their owners the handsome figure of $6.05 net per hundred.
